

- ❖ Definition of District Administration – Administration concerned with managing public affairs within a specified geographical area to ensure overall public welfare.
- ❖ The term district was mentioned only once in the original Constitution.
 - ✓ Article 233 – In the context of the appointment of District Judges.
 - ✓ Subsequently, under the 73rd and 74th Constitutional Amendment Acts, the term district appeared in Article 243 in the form of the District Council, and in Article 243ZD in reference to the District Planning Committee.

History of the administrative unit called the district

- ❖ The district has existed as an administrative unit since ancient times. Such a unit functioned throughout ancient periods and was known by different names, such as:

District in ancient, medieval, and modern periods

Period	Name of the District	Officer
Vedic Period	Vish	Vishpati
Mauryan Period	Janapada	Janapada Officer
Gupta Period	Vishaya/Vishama	Vishayapati
Mughal Period	Sarkar	Karodi, Faujdar/Amil
British Period	District	Collector (in 1772 AD)

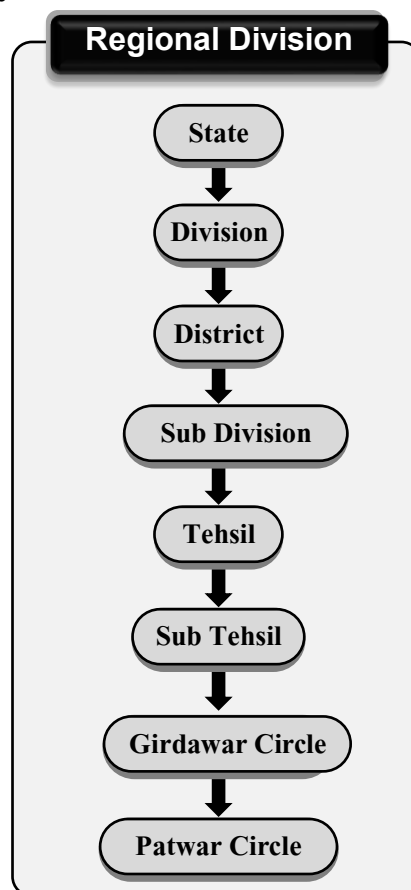

Note – After independence, the district unit was retained, and its head came to be known as the District Collector.

- ❖ The term district was first used by the East India Company in 1776 in the context of Calcutta. Prior to this, in 1772, the post of Collector was created in Bengal for revenue collection.
- ✓ DISTRICT – 1776
- ✓ Post of Collector – 1772

❖ Meaning of District Administration:

The word district is originally derived from the Latin word districtus, which means judicial administration.

- ✓ According to M. P. Sharma – “A state is divided into smaller units for administrative convenience, and such a smaller unit is called a district”.
- ✓ According to S. S. Khera – “District administration is the overall management of public functions within the district; it is that part of public administration which operates within the geographical boundaries of the district.”

- India follows a three-tier system of government (Central Government, State Government, and Local Government). For administrative convenience, a federal system of governance was adopted, since it was extremely difficult to administer such a vast territory directly. Therefore, for the effective functioning of administration, India has been regionally divided as follows(as shown in the flowchart):

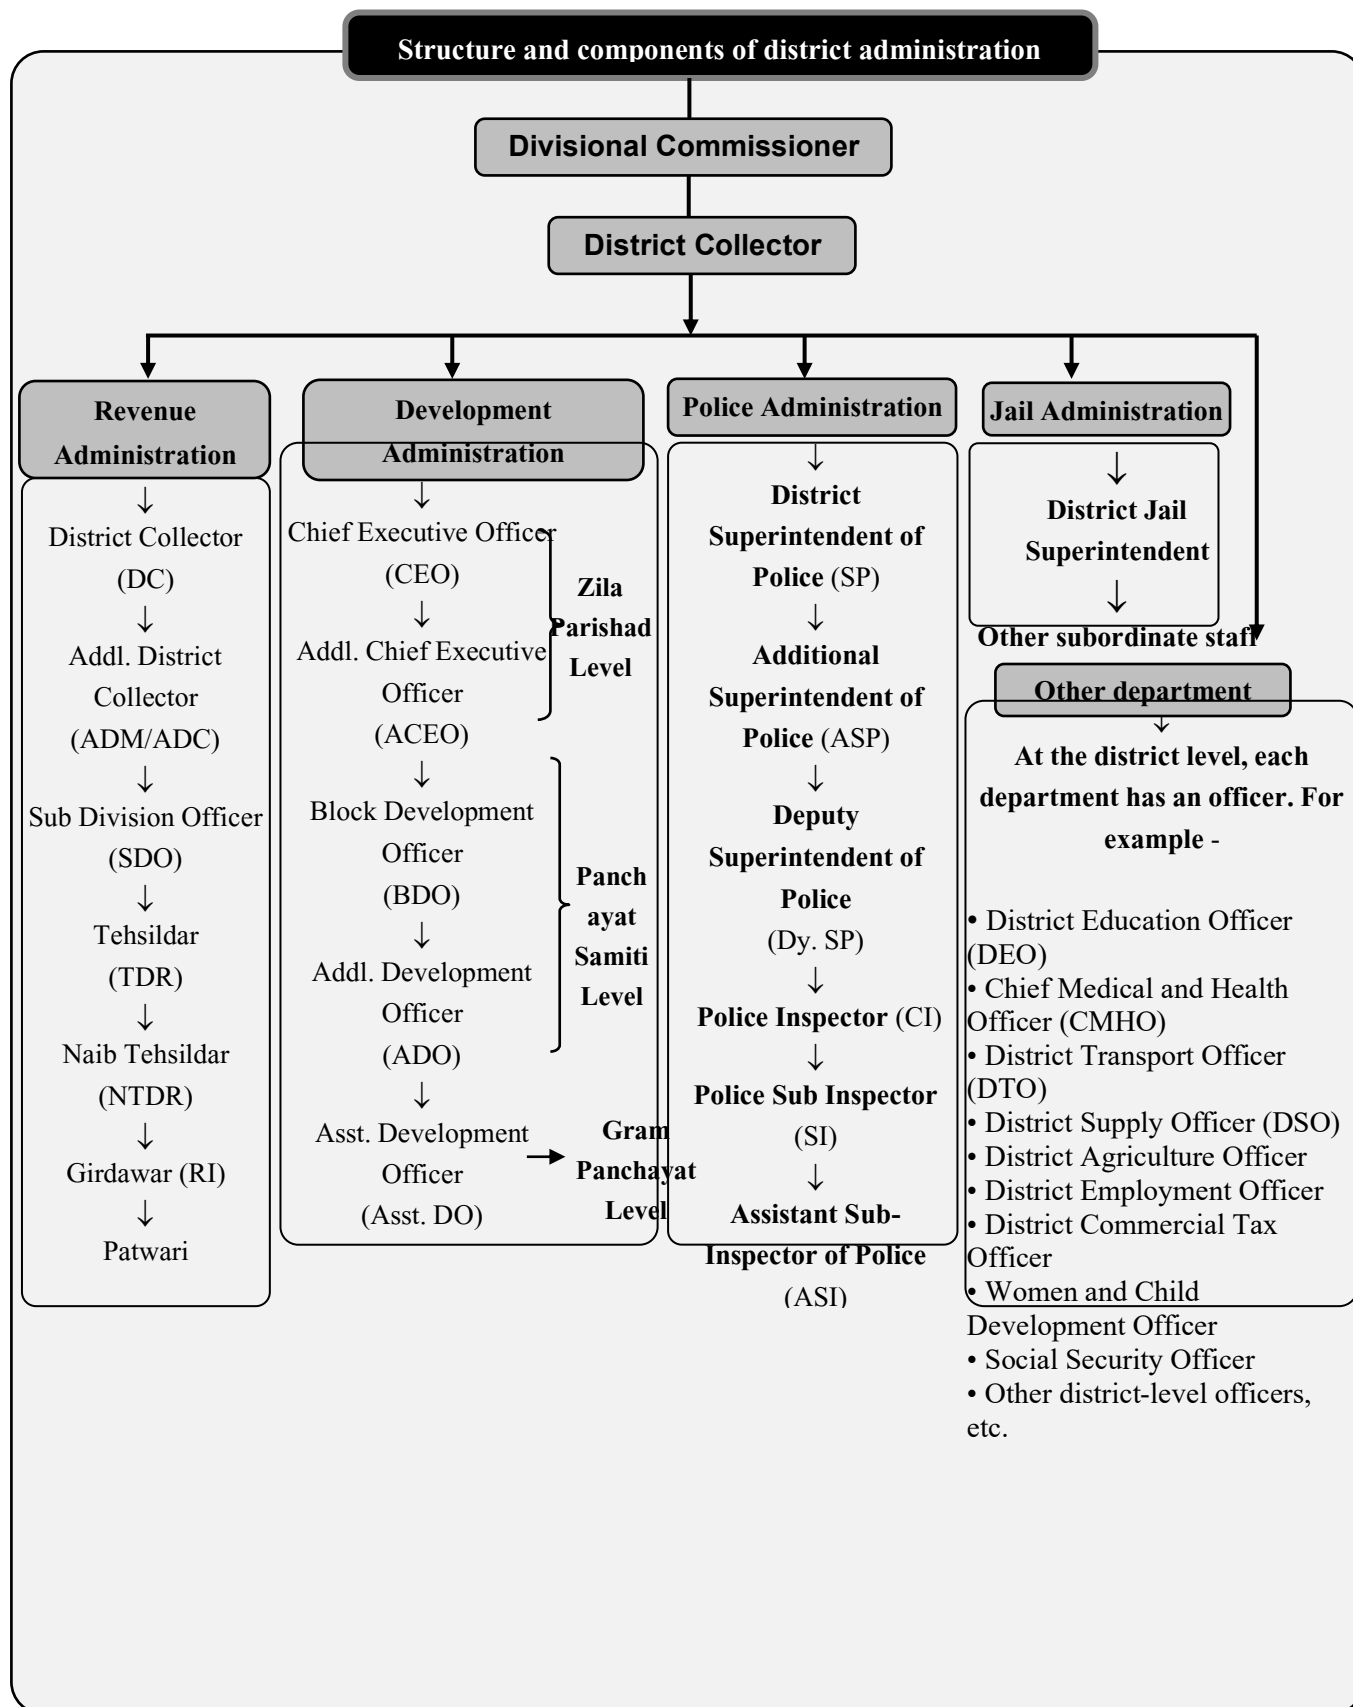

Characteristics of District Administration

District administration in India is the most important link that forms the foundation of regional administration and serves as the backbone of state administration. Its key characteristics are as follows:

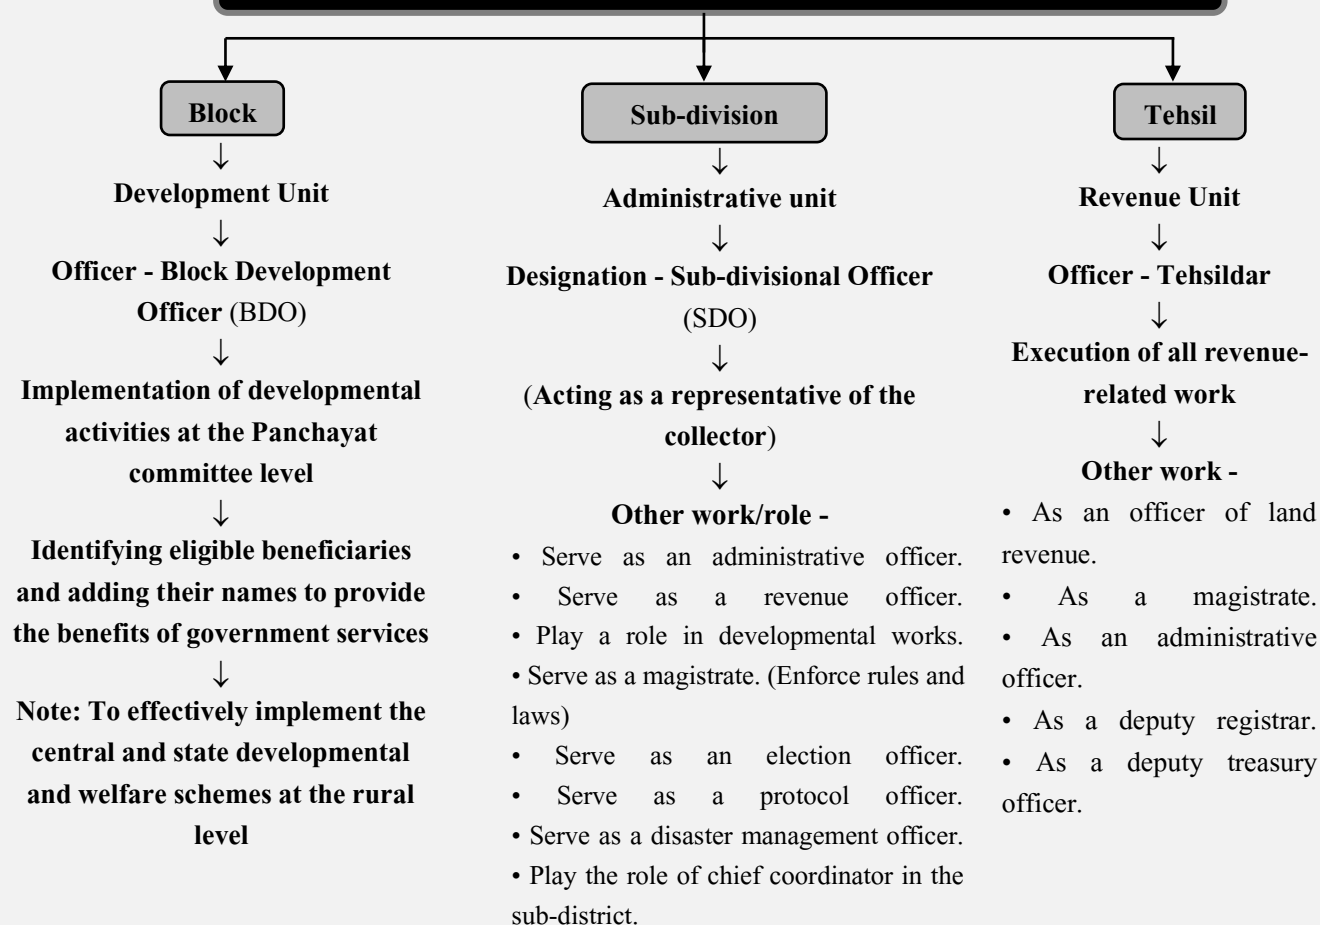

- ✓ District administration in India is the result of historical continuity and has stood the test of time.
- ✓ A district acts as a bridge between the state government and the rural level, as well as between the state government and the common citizen.
- ✓ At the district level, the district administration functions under the headship of the District

Collector.

- ✓ A district operates through various sub-units.
- ✓ District administration is also known as the “mini government” because regional offices of almost all state departments function at the district level.
- ✓ Every district has its own social and cultural identity, which naturally influences its administration.
- ✓ At present, the district is the top unit of regional administration.

Arguments in Favour of Divisional Commissioner System	Arguments Against Divisional Commissioner System
• The post is meaningful for supervising and controlling district administration and ensuring effective implementation of government schemes.	• The Divisional Commissioner has only a formal role in administration; hence, it is an unnecessary financial burden on the state government.

• Necessary for coordination among departments, employees, and officers at the divisional level.	• Unnecessary interference in the work of the District Collector (“Collector over Collector”).
• Acts as a friend, advisor, and guide to young district collectors.	• The Divisional Commissioner is a senior and experienced IAS officer, so they should preferably be appointed in the state secretariat.
• Ensures delegation and decentralization of power in the state.	• The area of a division is too large, making it an ineffective administrative unit.
• Strengthens Panchayati Raj Institutions and provides them with proper guidance and advice.	• Increases levels in the administrative hierarchy, leading to delays in public service delivery.

District Collector

- In Indian administration, the post of the District Collector is a legacy of the British rule. This post is one of the most important and prestigious positions India inherited from the colonial system. From independence till today, the importance of this post has not diminished.
- In 1772, Warren Hastings created the post of Collector in Bengal for revenue collection.
- India’s first District Collector – Ralph Sheldon.
- In 1773, the post of Collector was abolished, but in 1781, it was re-established.
- In 1787, the Collector was given judicial powers in addition to revenue authority. Therefore, the Collector was referred to as “Little Napoleon.”
- In 1792, Lord Cornwallis transferred the judicial powers of the District Collector to the civil judiciary, because of which the Collector again remained mainly responsible for revenue collection.
- After independence, the post of District Collector was retained in India without any interruption.

- Lord Cornwallis (1786–1793)

Lord Cornwallis is known as the Father of the Civil Services in India.

- Cornwallis Code:
 - Judicial reforms in administration
 - Separation of the judiciary from the executive
 - Principle of the Rule of Law

Commissioner System

- The Commissionerate system was introduced in Rajasthan on 1 January 2011 in Jaipur and Jodhpur during the tenure of Chief Minister Shri Ashok Gehlot.
- An officer of the rank of Inspector General of Police (IGP) is appointed as the Police Commissioner.
 - ✓ Cities with a population of more than 10 lakh (1 million) are designated for the Commissionerate system (metro cities).
 - ✓ Examples: Delhi, Lucknow, Kanpur, Gautam Buddha Nagar, Jaipur, Jodhpur.

The Police Commissioner holds executive magistrate powers similar to that of the District Collector, such as:

- Issuing prohibitory orders and imposing curfew (Section 163, BNSS)
- Granting bail or sending an accused to judicial custody (Section 170, BNSS)
- Granting No Objection Certificates (NOC) for strikes, rallies, processions, and demonstrations

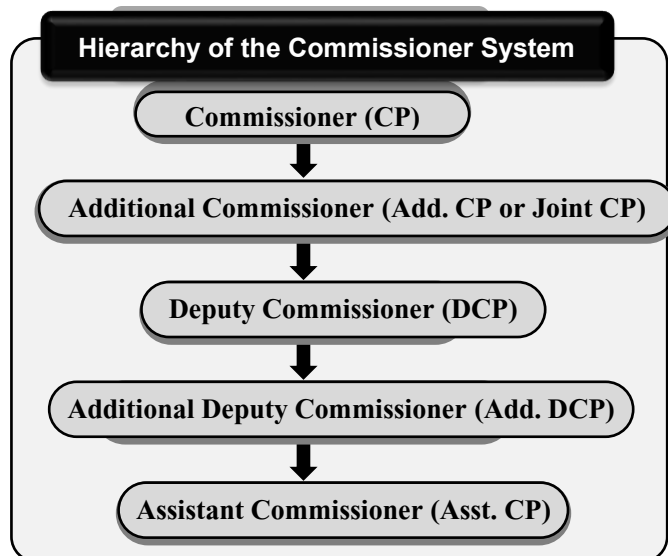

- Jaipur Police Commissioner – Shri Sachin Mittal
- Jaipur Police Commissioner (Special Operations) – Shri Rahul Prakash
- Jodhpur Police Commissioner – Shri Om Prakash-I

- ✓ 6th National Police Commission Report, 1983 – Discussed the implementation of the Police Commissioner System.
- ✓ 56th Conference of DGPs/IGs, 2021, Lucknow (Uttar Pradesh) – This conference emphasized implementing the Commissionerate System in metro cities and cities with a population of more than 10 lakh.

Need for the Commissionerate System

- To empower the police and ensure quick action for controlling crimes in large cities.
- To reduce the dependence of the police on the District Collector (general administration).
- To decrease the workload of the District Collector and enable quicker and more effective action by the police.
- To provide citizens with arrest and bail facilities under one roof (e.g., bail under Section 170, BNSS).
- To make police and magisterial functions available at one place, enabling quick decision-making and saving time.
- To ensure effective prevention of increasing crimes in big cities.
- To grant greater autonomy and authority to the police.

Functions of the Commissioner of Police

- • Imposing prohibitory orders/curfew to maintain law and order.
- • Granting bail in cases of breach of peace.
- • Controlling incidents like terrorism and smuggling.
- • Maintaining public peace and protecting public property.
- • Issuing hotel licenses, bar licenses, and weapon licenses.
- • Granting permission (NOC) for rallies and demonstrations in the Commissionerate area.
- • Ensuring community policing in the Commissionerate.
- • Maintaining high morale of police personnel in the Commissionerate.
- • Ensuring traffic management in the Commissionerate.
- • Controlling organized crime in the Commissionerate.
- • Establishing coordination with other departments in the Commissionerate.
- • Inspecting police stations and police outposts in the Commissionerate.
- • Tackling continuous law-and-order issues in metropolitan areas.
- • Conducting decoy operations in the Commissionerate.
- • Reviewing FIRs (First Information Report) and FRs (Final Report).
- • Personnel administration tasks such as recruitment, promotion, training, disciplinary action, ACR, and transfers.
- • Ensuring the safety of police personnel, police vehicles, weapons, etc., in the Commissionerate.
- • Implementing various campaigns in the Commissionerate, such as Operation Garima, Cyber Shield Campaign, Operation Mission Sankalp, etc.

Preventive Measures

CRPC, 1973	BNSS, 2023	Description
107-116	126-135	Binding a person to prevent possible crime and maintain peace (security for keeping the peace).

122	141	Imprisonment for violating the bond.
133	152	Issuing conditional orders to remove public nuisance.
145	164	Procedure in immovable property disputes where there is a likelihood of breach of peace.
144	163	Prohibitory orders and curfew.
151	170	Granting bail in breach-of-peace cases and sending to judicial custody.

❖ Additional powers of the Commissioner

The powers granted to the District Magistrate (DM) are also exercised by the Police Commissioner.

1. Issuing arms licenses
2. Implementing Section 163 of BNSS
3. Granting bail under Section 170
4. Exercising BNSS Sections 126–135, 141, 152, 163, 164, 170, etc.
5. Granting permission for strikes, rallies, and processions (NOC)

Collector vs Superintendent of Police (SP)

➤ Origin of conflict – As a result of the provisions mentioned in BNS 2023 and BNSS 2023.

- ✓ In the district, the ultimate responsibility for law and order lies with the Collector, while the Superintendent of Police is the head of the district police administration.
- ✓ In situations of law and order, the police administration works under the District Collector (district administration).

➤ Conclusion – The Superintendent of Police and the District Collector should work in coordination.

- ✓ The current system is correct; there is only a need for mutual understanding and coordination between the two.

Arguments in Favor of the Collector	Arguments in Favor of the Superintendent of Police (SP)
If the Collector is the head of all departments, then why is the police department separate? (Why the exception?) There is fear of 'khaki' (police) among common people; therefore, the role of the District Collector is more important. The Collector is the representative of the State Government in the district; therefore, the police department should remain under him.	The SP has extensive experience in policing — e.g., in crime matters under BNS, BNSS, BSA. In police-related matters, the SP is a specialist, while the Collector is a generalist. The Collector already has excessive workload; hence police matters should be handled by the SP.

Example: Confidential reports related to police are sent to the Home Department (Annual Crime Report).

The Collector is a generalist officer with broad administrative experience.

For the protection of human rights, the Collector should be the administrative head, as police often face allegations of violating human rights.

The SP is the head of the police administration. The SP has deep knowledge of the serious nature of crimes and rising organized crime.

To maintain high morale of the subordinate police force, it is necessary that the SP remains the head. Under the principle of unity of command, conflict arises when subordinates receive orders simultaneously from both Collector and SP.
